

Top 5 British Takeaways

With the arrival of home delivery, services like Deliveroo or Uber Eats, if you live in a big city at least, pretty much any type of food is only a phone call away. Like it or not, takeaway is a big deal in the UK. Here are five of the most popular British takeaways:

- Curry

The most British of takeaways is undoubtedly a curry. Each person orders a portion of rice, a curry, and some side orders. The curries will vary from in spiciness from mild to extremely hot.

- Fish and Chips

This is the most traditional, but no longer the most popular, British takeaway. The fish (usually cod) is cooked in batter and served with thick chips.

- Chinese

British-style "Chinese" takeaway food is extremely popular but pretty different from the food people actually eat in China. Chinese restaurants normally offer a large selection of dishes.

- The Kebab

This Middle-Eastern fast food has a valued place in British takeaway culture. The kebab is a flatbread wrap containing slices of meat, different salads and spicy sauces.

- Pizza

Most British takeaway pizza has very little in common with authentic Italian pizza.
